Twenty-Seventh Sunday in Ordinary Time

Thoughts on Today's Liturgy

Reading 1: Genesis 2:18-24 The two of them become one flesh.
Reading 2: Hebrews 2:9-11 He who consecrates and those who are being consecrated all have one origin.
Gospel: Mark 10:2-16 Therefore what God has joined together, let no human being separate.

Reflection: Standing Equally Before God. Where are we to find language adequately to express the happiness of that marriage which the church cements, the oblation confirms, the benediction signs and seals, the angels celebrate, and the Father holds as approved? For all around the earth young people do not rightly and lawfully wed without their parents' consent. What kind of yoke is that of two believers who share one hope, one desire, one discipline, one service? They enjoy kinship in spirit and in flesh. They are mutual servants with no discrepancy of interests. Truly they are "two in one flesh." Where the flesh is one, the spirit is one as well. Together they pray, together bow down, together perform their fasts, mutually teaching, mutually entreating, mutually upholding. In the church of God they hold an equal place. They stand equally at the banquet of God, equally in crises, equally facing persecutions, and equally in refreshments. Neither hides anything from the other. Neither neglects the other. Neither is troublesome to the other. ~Tertullian, Letter to His Wife

Word of Life

"By embracing the mission entrusted to him, St. Juan Diego helped bring Christ's transforming love to cultures gripped by oppression and death... Like St. Juan Diego, let us embrace our daily mission to help others encounter God's transforming, life-giving love."
