25th Sunday in Ordinary Time

God is righteous in his deeds and he deals with us justly within the ambience of his mercy. As a righteous God, he warns those who take advantage of the vulnerable in society and feed themselves fat, instead of seeking the welfare of the weak, to desist from such behavior or face his wrath. God further calls upon those who bear the name of Christ and therefore serve as his messengers to distance ourselves from such misdeeds and tread the path of righteousness, devotion, faith, love, patience, and gentleness. These constitute the trademark that leads us into eternal life to which we are called through our baptism into the life of Christ. Heaven is a place of inclusivity, the house of God, and the final dwelling place of all humanity after our life here on earth. Hence, it belongs to all of the people. We however, need to justify our inclusion with good deeds. If we do not learn to live in harmony with all caliber of people here on earth, then we either, by our actions or inactions, automatically exclude ourselves from the joy of the Kingdom of God, our Universal and Eternal Home. -Father Emmanuel
